ANOTHER GOP PRESIDENTIAL VISIT,
ANOTHER STANCE ON THE ISSUES
-Former Massachusetts Governor Continues Practice of Flip-Flopping-

CHARLESTON, WV – With smooth-talking Mitt Romney making his way to the Mountain State today, the Chairman of the West Virginia Democratic Party warned fellow West Virginians to take the former Massachusetts governor's views on the issues with a grain of salt.

“Mitt Romney will be here on ‘Governor’s Day’ at the West Virginia State Fair, which leaves me curious – will we see Mitt Romney the Governor or Mitt Romney the presidential candidate?” questioned Nick Casey, Chairman of the West Virginia Democratic Party.

As Governor of Massachusetts, Romney campaigned as a pro-choice, anti-gun Republican in the Bay State. Now, as he tries to woo conservative voters for the 2008 race for president, Romney is changing his stance on those issues.

In addition, Romney has changed his tune on immigration reform. According to the Lowell Sun (3/30/2006), “I don’t believe in rounding up 11 million people and forcing them at gunpoint from our country, Romney said.”

However, he told ABC’s ‘This Week’ (2/18/2007) that “Those people who are here illegally should not get any benefit by being here. Those that have committed crimes should be taken out of the country. Those that are in our jails should be taken out of the country. Those who are on welfare, require government assistance, should leave the country.”

“Mitt Romney has relied on smooth talk to try to gain traction in presidential polls. Here in West Virginia, we rely on straight talk,” Casey said.
